LORA MENU

(150ml)

The earliest recorded alcohol free drinks from grapes are the roman drinks called Lora and Posca. Lora was made from pressing the leftover grape pomace from wine making and salt. This was then let down with water and was seen as good for the whole family.

Posca was a mixture of vinegar and water, often with herbal infusions for flavour.

*In the 16th and 17th century cordials and waters began to appear in British medicinal and cookery books such as The Widowes Treasure (1588), The Whole Body of Cookery (1661) and Accomplished ladies Delight (1675) which featured an artificial claret. These were all flavoured with ingredients such as rose, violet, honey, liquorice and mint.*

For this menu we have taken inspiration from the above to develop a selection of LORA. These are designed to pair with food by taking cues from wine taste and aroma descriptors.
